PRECIOUS PIECES

When renowned sculptor Jennine Parker saw the opportunity to translate some of her powerful bronze figures into delicate silver jewellery, the results were better than even she expected

It's taken more than a year for the germ of an idea to come to fruition, but now an exciting collection of limited edition fine silver jewellery that recreates the strong sculptural lines of her already successful bronze pieces is due to hit galleries late spring. Parker says: "Each piece has a textural feel, and a strong sense of physical movement - elements that I have carried over from my sculpture, but although these pieces are smaller they absolutely retain the power and energy of the larger works of art."

Fascinated with the beauty and curvaceousness of the female form, Jennine has always tried to incorporate simple flowing lines into her work. "My passion is definitely the human form, I love perfect lines, and the human figure creates many interesting shapes that are pleasing to the eye. More than anything I love the fact that people are drawn to the shapes I create, and seem to feel the need to touch and hold them, which is a deliberate intention on my part."

As with her sculptural work Jennine works to combine different surfaces within a piece, and it is the juxtaposition of super smooth polished silver with a rougher, almost organically formed style, that sets her apart from a traditional silversmith.

These special pieces feel hand crafted, with the attention of an artist's eye. "Learning about the process of creating jewellery has opened up a new creative path for me, and it is thrilling to see that my art can be worn as jewellery," she says.

This first jewellery collection consists of earrings, rings bangles, and pendant necklaces. All are limited edition pieces of £495 and made in Sterling Silver.
